The steady, unseasonable, uncompromising heat of last week cleared New-York of all who had the opportunity to slip away, if only for a day, to refresh themselves at one or another of the country clubs by mountain, stream or sea. Transatlantic steamhave carried away the latest complement of ers have carried away the latest complement of fashionable tourists, including Mrs. Samuel J. Colsate, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt and Mr. and Mrs. A Cass Canfield Still, with all the coming and soling, there yet remain a large number of persons of recognized prominence in the highest social circles of New-York, and the favorite resort of these people in this season of dispersions and departures is the Metropolitan Opera House.

The opening of the supplementary season on Monday night was a complete social success. On that evening and at some of the subsequent performese society turned out in large numbers, and the of rich gowns and jewels in the boxes and in the orchestra stalls was most elaborate. Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, jr., looking exceedingly sleeves of white satin spangled with silver, on Mongown of pale blue satin, with trimmings of white chiffon and bows of cherry colored satin ribbon. Mrs. Stanford White, in a flowered brocade, had as her guest in one of the boxes in the grand tier Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, whose costume was of pink moire, trimmed with point lace. Miss Anna Sands, in mauve moire, was with Mrs. Ogden Mills in the latter's box. Mrs. Almeric Hugh Paget, in a gown of pale blue molre, occupied a box with her father, William C. Whitney, and Miss Beatrice Bend, whose gown was of shell-pink silk and white chiffon. hade of pink satin, the bodice trimmed with

The weddings of the week passed off in a flood of sunshine and a blaze of summer heat powerful enough to cause discomfort to the troops of brides and bridegrooms and the hundreds of guests who attended the various nuptial celebrations and the receptions which followed them. The young people enjoyed several informal dances, which served as a sort of winding-up of the season. One of the most enjoyable dancing parties of the week was given by Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge on Friday night, at her home in East Thirty-fourth-st., in honor of the Yale Banjo and Glee Club. The dance, which was thoroughly informal, followed the concert given by the club at Carnegle Hall. Another incident which interested the young people was the closing meeting of the Thursday Evening Roller Skating Club, which occurred on the same evening in the Berkeley Armory, in West Forty-fourth-st. The entertainment took the form of a dance, and in honor of the occasion the building was decorated with growing palms, flags and bunting. As the guests arrived they were received, just inside the entrance to the ballroom, by Mrs. Benjamin S. Church, Mrs. Ausustus Zabriskie, Mrs. Frederic Lefferts, Mrs. Ausustus Zabriskie, Mrs. Frederic Lefferts, Mrs. Ausustus Zabriskie, Mrs. Frederic Lefferts, Mrs. Suuvesant Fish Morris. The young men who had charge of the floor were Sydney L. Smith, Adolphus Smedberg, jr., Thomas Savage Clay and Frederick Ramond Lefferts. The last-named led the cotillon, dancing with Miss Mabel Burke, of Orange. After the cotillon a seated supper was served in the large dining-room. Some of the young people present were Miss Sarah Hard, Miss Helen Barber, Miss Ethel Davies, Miss Mary Van Nest, Miss Susie Valentine, Miss Ells Jackson, Miss Lillie Morrison, Miss Ethel Dominick, Miss Elsie Cleveland, Miss Helen Lefferts, the Misses Zabriskie, Miss Richmond, Miss Elline Soutter. MUSIC-THE DRAMA.

YESTERDAY'S MUSIC.

Mr. Paderewski gave the last recital of his third American tour in Carnegle Music Hall yesterday afternoon. He was heard by as many persons as could crowd into the immense room-let us say 3,500. At the same time about 4,000 listened to a representation of "Les Huguenots" at the Metropolitan Opera House. In the evening the same places contained audiences again, though less numerous ones, the Symphony Society giving its last concert under the direction of Walter Damrosch the hall and the opera-goers being entertained with "La Traviata" and "La Navarraise." sidering the lateness of the date and the oppressive weather the record ought to occupy a prominent place in the musical annals of the city. It would certainly seem as if in the face of it no one will ever dare to suggest either that New-York offers an insufficiency to its music patrons, or that the latter are unappreciative of their advantages. Mr. Paderewski's recital, as was to have been expected, was turned into a most extraordinary emonstration of the admiring regard in which he is held by the people. The demonstration, indeed, was one calculated to enlist sympathy for the great planist, for it was sadly and utterly indifferent to his comfort. His programme contained a number of trying compositions not played at any of his previous recitals this year, such as Bach's "Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue," Beethoven's Sonata op. 111, Schumann's "Papillons" and Chopin's B flat minor sonata. And these he played with a devotion that effaced all selfish consideration. The set list of formance, yet the public, regardless of the obvious for twenty minutes more, while they crowded down the aisles and shouted their gratitude and admiration. He added three pieces to the programme—Rubinstein's "Valse Caprice," Chopin's A flat waltz and Liszt's second Hungarian Rhapsody. Three and List's second Hungarian Rnapsony. Infee laurel wreaths were sent up to him, and it seemed as if the enthusiasm would never reach an end. The tour thus concluded is without parallel in the musical history of the country. Mr. Paderewski has given ninety-two concerts, and his gross receipts have been almost a quarter of a million dollars. It is said that the sum which he will take with him is $200,009.

At the Symphony Society's concert in the evening Mr. Paderewski's pupil, Miss Szumowska, played Saint-Saene's concerto in G minor. It was not a striking performance, but attested the possession of gifts which when more fully matured will make Miss Szumowska an admirable artist. The orchestral numbers were Schumann's 'Rhenish' symphony and three overtures-Gluck's 'Iphigenia in Aulis,' Weber's "Preischitz" and Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet." Mr. Ffrangeon Davies, who introduced himself favorably at the last concert of the Philharmonic Society, sang an uninspiring air from Sullivan's 'Ivanhoe.'

Madame Melba, who was to have taken part in the performance of 'Les Huguenots,' was prevented from doing so by illness, and Marie Engle took her place. Otherwise the cast was that which was denominated ideal last ecason, and the opera was excellently done. Mme. Saville was the Violetta of the evening representation and wholly satisfactory, though the heartlest outbursts of applause were those compelled by Mme. Calve's marvellous impersonation of the Navarraise. laurel wreaths were sent up to him, and it seemed

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE REOPENED.

"THE SPECULATOR."

Mr. Broadhurst's play of "The Speculator," produced last night in the Fifth Avenue Theatre, was received in a friendly spirit by a numerous, appreciative, and patient audience. The piece is conventional in every particular,-even to the extent of containing "the guif that is between us,"-but the ancient materials of which it is composed have been used in such a manner as to create one dramatic effect, and to provide several ludicrous incidents, several declarations of love, and at least three be rothals. The picture of manners,—the scene being Chicago and the time to-day,-passes airily from caricature to farce, and ends in insipidity. Such a colloquy as that between the speculator and the French nobleman, even in Chicago, would be impossible, and such allegations as the remark that "Europe has the nobility and America the men" are the cheapest kind of trash. The situation in which two rival speculators are arrayed against each other, each at "the ticker," while the strife that they promote is in progress at the exchange, is the main thing in the play, however, and that may possibly carry it. These rivals are Mr. Fullerton and Mr. Duncan. The son of Mr. Fullerton and the daughter of Mr. Duncan are lovers. When the strife begins Mr. Duncan is predominant, and, after an exciting competition, Mr. Fulierton is dejected and is compelled to ask for mercy, which Mr. Duncan refuses to grant. An accident suddenly threw the market against the conqueror, and Mr. Fullerton is completely victorious; and after that there is a somewhat charming adjustment of the relations of the lovers,-Mr. Fullerton showing a magnanimity that his enemy can hardly comprehend. Mr. Seabrooke as Mr. Fullerton animated the whole atmosphere of the piece with exhibarating vitality. has to speak a jargon of that Western slang which adds so much to the natural burdens of human life, adds so much to the natural outrops and humo ous, and he imparts an agreeable sense of goodnes honesty and gentle feeling, and likewise of centive talent, to apprehend character and to e press it. He was often applauded, and after it second curtain he made a brief speech, saying the he had been driven out of comic opera and was discous to find acceptance in this new field. "If ye can stand me in this," he said, "I can stand you a bluff sentiment which was much approved I his hearers. In the auxiliary performances the was respectable mediocrity. This is the cast. THE X RAYS AND TUBERCULOSIS.

SURGEON-GENERAL STERNBERG SAYS REPORTS OF THEIR VALUE SHOULD BE ACCEPTED WITH CAUTION. Washington, April 18 (Special).-Surgeon-General

Washington, April 18 (Special)—Surgeon-General Sternberg, of the Army, discussing the possibility of the application of X rays to the destruction of tuber-culosis bacili, said to-day: "It is not impossible that the Röntgen rays may prove to have a certain germicidal value. It is well demonstrated that ex-posure to direct sunlight does destroy pathogenic bacteria. In 1892 we found that the cholera germ falls to grow after being exposed to direct sunlight for an hour or more. Dr. Koch, the famous German fails to grow after being exposed to direct sunlight for an hour or more. Dr. Koch, the famous German bacteriologist, states that the tubercle bacilius is destroyed by the action of direct sunlight in a time varying from a few minutes to several hours, depending upon the thickness of the layer exposed. Glesler, in 1892, in experiments made upon the typhoid bacilius, found that all portions of the solar spectrum except the red rays exercised a restraining influence upon the development of this baciffus. The electric light gave a similar result. There is also some recent experimental evidence showing that a strong electrical current may destroy the vitality of electricity has not thus far proved to be available for the treatment of infectious diseases, and it is entirely doubtful whether the X rays will be available for the experiments made cannot be bacteriologists of established reputation. The published report from Chicago appears to me to be premature. The value of the experiments made cannot be estimated until of detailed account of the methods employed has been published. I have recently seen inasone of the medical journals reports of experiments upon bacteria which do not support the view that the Rontegen rays have any decided germicidal power, and, it is evident that we have not as yet the experimental is evidence at hand to justify the very sanguine anticipations said to have been expressed by Professor Röntgen as to the MUSICAL FESTIVAL IN NEW-HAVEN. New-Haven, Conn., April 18.-An audience of 2,000 New-Haven, Cond., April 18.—An audience of 2,000 persons attended the opening of the two days' musical festival by the Gouned Society of this city last night. A triple programme was given, including Rossini's "Stabat Mater," the "Harold Harfargar" of Professor H. W. Parker, of Yale, and a series of of Professor H. W. Parker, of Yale, and a series of Wagnerian numbers. The soloists were Frau Klafsky, Gertrude May Stein, Pol Plançon and H. Evans Williams. The Gounod chorus of 320 voices and the Boston Festival Orchestra supported the principals successfully. In the audience were music-lovers from all over New-England.

OBITUARY.

JOHN STETSON.

John Stetson, who died in Boston on Friday night, was for many years one of the best-known and wealthlest theatrical managers in the country. Boston was the usual centre of his operations, but they extended all over the land, and there was no place where there was a theatre where he was not self was born in Boston. He was about sixty years old. He had little education, and many stories were told of his ridiculous blunders, the most of them wholly false, no doubt. But nobody ever said that he was not shrewd, far-seeing and thoroughly skilful in the conduct of the theatrical business or any other that he chose to try. He was an athlete in his youth, and in 1866 he was a member then a champion runner, and a challenge was issued for him to run against any rival who wished to try conclusions with him. He managed the Olympic Theatre, in Boston, and then the Adelphi, which he left for the Howard Athenseum in 1870. Here Isaac B. Rich was his partner. They engaged a company and ran the house on a popular plan and made a tremendous success of it. Mr. Stetson left the Howard in 1880, and he was then said to have a fortune of about $750,000.

In the mean time, in 1875, he assumed the management of a theatre in this city, and in 1881 he took Booth's Theatre and kept it for about two years. He managed the Fifth Avenue Theatre for a time, and it was there that "The Pirates of Penzance" was first produced, W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan coming to this country to attend to the performance personally. Mr. Stetson also had the management in America of several of the other Gilbert and Sullivan operas, as for instance "The Mikado," "Ruddygore" and "The Gondollers." It was reported a few weeks ago that he was also to have the American rights to the latest one, "The Grand Duke." Mr. Stetson was for many years the manager of the Globe Theatre, in Boston, being in charge of it up to the time when it was burned, some two years or so ago. He had also managed many travelling companies, including those of James O'Neill, whom he started on his career in "Monte Cristo," Salvini and Mme. Modjeska.

Ars. Stetson was Miss Kate Stokes. She belonged to a Kentucky family, but was born in Brooklyn. Her father was a circus manager for a time, and the daughter became an expert rider, being connected afterward with the Barnum show. She went on the stage, joined Augustin Daly's company, then went to one of Mr. Stetson's companyes, and was married to him in 1857. She has appeared on the stage occasionally since. She acted with Robert Mantell in "Tangled Lives," and only three years ago she played the part of Mrs. Eastlake Chapel in "The Crust of Society," in one of her husband's companies.

Mr. Stetson had been in poor health for a long time. He had also had two strokes of apoplexy, one and two years ago. At the time of his death he was the proprietor of the Park Theatre, in Boston, but he had prac'eally given up other business, except his hotel, aircady referred to, which was opened not long ago.

His death was due to pneumonta. He had recently been busy superintending the erection of his new hotel on the old Globe Theatre site, and had overtaxed his strength. He caught cold, and last Tuesday was obliged to give up work. Pneumonia developed rapidly, and resulted fatally.

LIEUTENANT THOMAS C. PATTERSON. It was sad news to the many friends of Lieutenant Thomas C. Patterson when the announcement of his death in Pau, France, was made in The Tribune yesterday. A brief cable dispatch was received by his mother at her home, No. 122 West Ninety-fifth-st., informing her of her son's death, but no further information was conveyed.

Lieutenant Patterson went abroad last November, accompanied by his intimate friend, Lieutenant accompanied by his intimate friend, Lieutenant Robert H.
